

Boston Seminar on Environmental History

Sponsored and hosted by the Massachusetts Historical Society, 1154 Boylston Street, Boston

- Panel: Native American Environmental History
October 9
2018
Lisa Brooks, Amherst College; Strother Roberts, Bowdoin College; Ashley Smith, Hampshire College; Thomas Wickman, Trinity College
Moderator: Cedric Woods, Institute for New England Native American Studies, University of Massachusetts Boston
- Hurricane of the New South: 'Mud Work' and Transformations in Black Labor on the South Carolina Sea Islands at the Dawn of Jim Crow
November 13
2018
Caroline Grego, University of Colorado Boulder
Comment: Chad Montrie, University of Massachusetts Lowell
- A Nice History of Bird Migration: Ethology, Expertise, and Conservation in 20th Century North America
December 11
2018
Kristoffer Whitney, Rochester Institute of Technology
Comment: Marilyn Ogilvie, University of Oklahoma
- Camp Benson and the "GAR Camps": Recreational Landscapes of Civil War Memory in Maine, 1886-1910
January 15
2019
C. Ian Stevenson, Boston University
Comment: Ian Delahanty, Springfield College
- Amputated from the Land: Black Refugees from America and the Neglected Voices of Environmental History
February 12
2019
Bryon Williams, Academy at Penguin Hall
Comment: John Stauffer, Harvard University
- Biological Exchange in the Pacific World in the Age of Industrial Sugarcane Plantations
March 12
2019
Lawrence Kessler, Consortium for the History of Science, Technology, and Medicine
Comment: Nancy Shoemaker, University of Connecticut
- Environmental Racism and Environmental Justice in Boston
April 9
2019
Michael Brennan, University of Maine
Comment: Daniel Faber, Northeastern University

Tuesdays at 5:15 PM. A light sandwich supper follows. Attendance is free. Subscriptions are available ($25 per year) for online access to the pre-circulated essays in 4 series.*

RSVP to seminars@masshist.org. Follow us on Twitter @MHS_Research.

*The Boston Seminar on African American History, the Boston Area Seminar on Early American History, the Boston Seminar on Environmental History, and the Boston Seminar on Modern American Society and Culture. Visit www.masshist.org/research/seminars to learn more about the other series.